SnailFM is a cool-sounding application that was created by the SnailDOS community.

What DOS and radio have in common is hard to say, but the beats that are being shared with the user are definitely worth hearing, especially if you're fighting monotony when working and would need a little incentive to become more productive. The program can easily be set up and equally simple uninstalled when it reaches its purpose and is no longer needed. A friendly work environment The app itself is all about having a friendly work environment around you. The music that is played within the app doesn't have any lyrics. You won't hear any familiar tunes because there is no copyright music included. There aren't that many settings to play around with. You can reset the whole app if it starts acting strange, but that wasn't the case during our test session. The program itself is made up of a couple of colored windows with various welcome messages, and the main area where you can either play or pause the tunes. Simple, yet informative The application, although pretty basic, still displays the artist and name of the song. This is great both for the user and the artist if we see this app as an area for starting performers to make themselves known. The app itself doesn't display any annoying prompts and can easily be minimized if you'd like to have a cleaner workspace. Aside from a cool name and dozens of interesting instrumental tunes, SnailFM doesn't have much else to offer. Indeed, if you feel that too much silence could be counterproductive, this app could be a great aid for you when working. snailfm is the second greatest application I've discovered. I wonder why it hasn't been there before. You can actually hear these beats on the radio, just like real radio, but without any of the commercials. you can also play it while you're working. The tunes are actually fantastic. thanks for another great product. The one thing about this is that it's for windows 95, 98, and 98se only. Overall, this is my #1 favorite application. snailfm

description: snailfm is an app that you can use to listen to the radio. It has some great tunes, like this beat, that are not in real radio. Because it's actually the radio, the beat will not be interrupted by commercials. I tried out this app a while ago, and i liked it a lot. The only thing i don't like about it is that it has to be running while you're doing work, but once you get used to it, you will have no more trouble with this. My favorite part of this is that you can use it in your room, whether you're at school or home. [Editor's Note: Never updated in over two years, the main page has been removed]
