against gays and lesbians. In an interview with The Denver Post, Suthers also said that he doesn't believe in gay marriage. He said Colorado should not buy products from companies who disagree with its stance on gay marriage, which is legal in the state. Suthers was a witness at the trial of Colorado's most high-profile anti-gay rights activist, Kim Davis, who faces contempt-of-court charges for defying a judge's order last year to issue marriage licenses to gay couples. "Where you live matters, and people make choices," Suthers said. "You don't have to buy a product from a company that supports (Davis), and you should boycott a company that supports (proposed) anti-gay marriage legislation and doesn't support civil rights." Davis, the Rowlett, Texas, clerk who was jailed after she denied marriage licenses to gay and lesbian couples in the name of her Christian beliefs, is running for re-election this year. Her opponents include Denver District Attorney Mitch Morrissey and Arapahoe County District Attorney Carol Chambers, who is not running for re-election. Fifty-four percent of Colorado voters supported amending the state constitution to ban gay marriage in a 2012 survey by the Denver Post and the University of Denver's Rosenstiel School of Marine and Atmospheric Science.
