Enviado por FacebookQ: Creating a Rabin-Karp algorithm in Java I'm trying to implement Rabin-Karp algorithm in java but the problem is that I just can't implement it. Can anyone give me some hints how to do that in Java? Thanks in advance. A: Alright, well I can give you an answer, but I have no idea if it is the right way. So this may get downvoted. Well, the basic algorithm is simple. First you need a Matrix with the words. Second, look at the position where the word is (words are represented by letters) and see if the same word appears in the matrix. If it doesn't, it should not be added. If it does, then check if the words present in this position are lesser or equal to the searched word. If yes, continue with the next step, else, set the flag to 1 and continue. So, we are basically checking if the word is present in the matrix, if yes, whether it is lesser or equal to the word we are checking.

Well, instead of manually looping through the matrix, you can use an array. Here is a simple example in java :

public class Kabos{ public static void main(String[] args){ String[] words={"business"}; String word=words[0]; String char[] wordArr = word.split(""); String[] letterArr = new

String[word.length()]; int
i,j,count =0; for(i=0;i
