A lot of software programs come preinstalled on your computer but you may .Q: How do I get a Countdown timer with seconds and milliseconds using c# Hi I am developing a countdown timer using c# and I want to get the following output. 00:00 I want to display the countdown timer with milliseconds in it. I have tried all possible code but I only got the output shown in the example above. Any help would be appreciated. A: You need to use TimeSpan. var myTimeSpan = TimeSpan.FromSeconds(1234.123456); var formattedTime = myTimeSpan.ToString("MM:ss"); var formattedTime2 = myTimeSpan.ToString("mm:ss"); Q: Why doesn't ADT work with JSP? I have been building a REST application for JSP using the RESTlet library. The problem I am having is that the library relies on using the servlet API of JSP. However, ADT in Eclipse is not recognizing JSP as a Java program, and so won't compile. Is there an alternative RESTlet library for ADT? Or, can JSP be used with RESTlet? A: JSP is really not a web programming language. It is only used to generate pages. , his hand brushed against its soft, furry side. A friendly greeting. 'That's the end of the road,' he thought.
