New Avengers is all about the Avengers' worst nightmare, the event .Q: Do I need to fiddle with my multicolumns if I only plan on running a 4-panel story for the single issue? I'm just creating the first issue of a short arc in my comic, and the story will only take place in one (small) environment. That means that the page count will be relatively low - about 4-5 pages. I can't use a high-res print (I'm not that much of a printer) and even a medium print won't suffice for a page count like that. The page flow of the story will look like this: Then, I have a few pages for stuff going on in the next issue, which will be released in a week (it's one of those monthly issues that have like 5 to 6 back-to-back pages). I'm planning to use a multicolumn layout with each panel in a different column, and no bleed. I'm considering either a 2-panel story (2 pages) or a 3-panel story (3 pages), and I'm wondering if it would be better to use the 2-panel story if I'll be releasing only the first part of the arc. Untraceable RFID Blocking Iron Man Super Hero Shirt. For Those Who Dare.Q: MySQL select rows that appear in records of different tables I have two MySQL tables, table 1: MyTable (id, user, group_id, name) Table 2: MyTable2 (id, mytable_id, page_name, page_url) My question is: how do I list all the records of table 1 where there are matching records in table 2? For example, my table 1 has the following data 1, Tom, 2, This is Tom's record 2, Sally, 1, This is Sally's record 3, Tom, 2, This is Tom's record 4, Joe, 3, This is Joe's record My table 2 has the following data 1, 2, First record, 2, 3, Second record, 3, 4, Third record, In the example above, I would like a query that would return me the following data (note the first record of Tom has been duplicated and the 2nd record of Sally has been removed). 1, Tom, 2, This is Tom's record 2, Sally, 3, This is Sally's record 3, Tom, 4, This is Tom's record I have tried numerous queries with left joins and right joins and nothing has worked. The closest I got was the following query, but it lists all the records of Tom. select table1.id, table2.mytable_id, table1.name from table1 left join table2 on table1.id=table2.mytable_id A: select t1.id, t1.user, t1.group_id, t1.name, t2.page_name from table1 t1 inner join table2 t2 on t1.id = t2.mytable_id order by t1.id, t2.page_name Q:
