DESTROY YOUR ENEMIES WITH ONLY YOUR GIGAS! That's POWER made for YOU!

Attack a group of enemies together at once with the Gigas Burst, even if you've never played the game, it's easy to understand!

Weapons and Servants

Power increases the damage of attacks when its status is up! With its status up, all the attacks from the Servants equipped using the Gigas Burst will be strengthened, letting you wipe out your enemies easily. But even if its status is down, the Power of the Battle Gauge that appears when its status is up still continues to build up energy, which will be used to attack.

n click change image source, SSRS Not experienced enough to figure out. We have SSRS Report with an Image object inside it. The Image ct has a static source defined and the report renders it fine. When the rt is run through SSRS it then the image object is made into a plateField. In this new form of the Image object, it now has source erties for rounded corners, gradient, height / width and a few rs... My question is, how can I make an on-click event for the Image, s the report is being rendered, on a click the image will source ge. The available actions and options for the report are: "Use the ge as an Image" "Place the image as a picture" "Repaint the report" s is the option I'm looking for here) I like this option as it is the nest approach but all the the options available in the above are lting in the Image object no longer being a Image object. So, how can ke the source of the image on click change? I like this option as a few e other options will result in it changing the source to something like dioButton. A: This is not possible through SSRS. You would have to ify the BackgroundImage property manually through code each time report is ran. Saturday, June 24, 2007 Katie Dewhirst,
