Over the past 20 years, the New TOS, and the TNG have been going through various life changes and become a little tougher, a little less kind. PC gaming changed all that. Our friends, who soon learned to hate the PC, finally threw it out the window for something it could do better than PCs. CIG, Inc., a massive new company with a ton of cash, decided to combine their PC expertise with the worlds greatest space simulator. They decided to give the world their second best space simulator. This is the story of the most inclusive and unique space sim ever built. It's also a very weird space sim. Please read! Story: The year is 4000 AD. The Earth is dying, monsters are rising, and monsters are dying. Meanwhile, an evil conglomerate is reaching for its cash-filled pockets. As a stellar fortitude veteran and a naval archeologist, you must choose your side. The quest for a better future begins! Piloted by the finest private crew in the galaxy: Shub Niggurath. Voice over by Carl Monday and Bill Bailey. Monsters guaranteed! Characters: There are a great deal of potential character choices. Characters will be able to choose among hundreds of different science and engineering skills, which all contribute to their unique abilities. Science and engineering mods provide bonuses to equipment, systems, skills and more. This is the story of the most inclusive and unique space sim ever built. It's also a very weird space sim. What's new in SUPER ARMY OF TENTACLES 3, XPACK II: Call Of Koithulhu:

: A Game of Monsters and Myth! Bringing the sacred horror of the Caverns of Gaanzuutla to life at Gen Con 2014! I'm guessing that the gentleman in the top dress is Asblak, head sculpted by Aaron D. Taylor (foreword: So the name of this game has changed a little bit since the original desire was to have it be geared to the general public and not so much for a 'special' crowd like the members of G-Con. Instead what we are getting is, "A Game of Monsters and Myth!". Maybe "A Game of Monsters and Myth-a-Eons"? Game mechanics going to be very simple, requires zero reading of rule book, playing time 1-2 hours, referees should know how to run a simple RPG (or heck, they don't need to, just hand out Pen & Paper sheet and have them take each PC to their desired table or device to play. Fantastic.) What ever happened to a RPG system that used objects, weapons, and a bunch of stats that rolled up to decide if you would live or die? People are going to need a bunch of things to do to get into the game. An introduction document, sure. I'll provide that already. A set of quickstart manual/rules for the players, that's fine with me. Two small reference cards, one for 'who you're fighting' (as in the number of monsters, where they'll come from, etc), and one for 'what you're fighting' (what monsters, alignment, etc), likewise fine. Yes, he's got the cool looking styaf. But not all of them make it into the game. Our styaf's head casting was broken when we went into the second production run so he's not going to make it into our final version. He has nice billy-goats all right. Edit: oh, didn't notice we're also going to have the figures on the cover. A couple of us are going to be on a bookshelf in the exhibition hall. Maybe we'll add a select few for the new version of the game. "Just the ones that aren't in the pdf is all we're asking for". There will be multiple guides for the game for you to use if you end up getting into it. There will be multiple references in the game itself.

System Requirements:

Installation notes: 1) ETCTracker requires OpenGL, so if you don't have it installed already, I recommend installing it. 2) If you are using an ATI or AMD GPU, I recommend not installing the WebGL enabled version of ETCTracker, as it performs better and is less of a resource hog. 3) ETCTracker allows you to hide and toggle your tracking. If you're using a Stealth or Anti-Stealth marker, you won't be able to see it with tracking, unless you toggle it on.
