Adobe Lightroom While Adobe Photoshop is widely known, it is not the only image manipulation program. Adobe's Lightroom has become a favorite editing tool for many photographers, as well as those who just want to see an image without being as close up as possible. Lightroom is a tool that can be as simple as importing images and exporting a JPEG (see Figure 5-4) or you can customize and tune individual tools in the program. The various functions include importing and manipulating images, as well as creating slideshows and online galleries. Another feature that makes Lightroom appealing is its robust library of editing tools, many of which are available only in Lightroom. Lightroom is marketed as a full-featured software program that enables you to work with and edit your digital photographs. Photoshop Elements is a much cheaper version of Adobe Photoshop. It is also a good choice for photographers who need editing software that is more basic, but not as complex as Photoshop. FIGURE 5-4: One of the many options in Lightroom is the ability to create a JPEG file. ## Filters _Filters_ are effects that have been applied to an image. The most common of these are the ones we use to create dramatic effects in our images, such as blurring and warming. Filters are also useful for creating special effects, such as for adding a vignette (darkening the edges of the image). Figures 5-5 and 5-6 show images with their filters applied. FIGURE 5-5: Blurring and sharpening adds a bit of additional interest. FIGURE 5-6: Another filter, the one for adding a vignette, makes a monochromatic picture come to life.

Q: How to get the server name from android app? I need to get the server name(IP) from client android app. I have seen other question here, but didn't work for me. I have added android app in my tomcat server. How to get the server name of tomcat? Is there a way to test the app? A: You can get it out of the URI that your app is using. This is done using the following code: `String serverName = getServerName(); public String getServerName() { final String host = "" + getHost() + getContextPath(); if (host.endsWith("/")) { return host; } return host.substring(0, host.length() - 1); }` where `getHost()` is defined as follows: `protected String getHost() { final InetAddress addr = InetAddress.getByName(getServletRequest().getServerName()); return addr.getHostAddress(); }` The `serverName` can then be used to give a relevant experience, like for example: `"Here is your serverName: " + serverName` You can get it from the url that your app is using, so check your android device's web browser. If the URL is not in a format like you can still try the `getServerName()` method, to get the name that is visible in the URL, but do be aware that it may return null (if the name is not visible in the URL). Hope it helps, Valentin

What We Know About the Latest Donald Trump Tax Break The week's new Trump-related changes to the tax code came Sunday night, in the form of a bill to lower the corporate tax rate from 35 percent to 20 percent. A lot of news outlets focused their headlines and stories on President Trump's "tax reform" bill, which is really just a rebranding of the Bush-era tax cuts, but what most of the press are missing is that the biggest and most important part of the new tax break is a tax break for the middle class. The Trump administration's plan to cut the corporate tax rate is a massive reduction that will cost the federal government $350 billion over the next decade. But lower taxes will mean lower revenue for the federal government, so this is really just a tax cut for corporations and the super-wealthy. The Trump administration's plan to lower the corporate tax rate is a massive reduction that will cost the federal government $350 billion over the next decade. But lower taxes will mean lower revenue for the federal government, so this is really just a tax cut for corporations and the super-wealthy. The bulk of the American public will see a direct tax cut of less than $2 on average, according to a study by the Tax Policy Center. How will the tax cuts affect the average household? To be clear, the tax cuts will primarily benefit big business, rather than everyday Americans. That's why the real crunch here isn't how much Americans will save on their bills, but how they can afford to survive after their paychecks shrink. The bulk of the American public will see a direct tax cut of less than $2 on average, according to a study by the Tax Policy Center. Those of you who benefit from college tuition plans, medical care plans, or Medicaid might see a tax cut. But many of the tax breaks in the plan, including the deduction for the business interest and doubling of the standard deduction, would tilt the tax scales for the average American. Still, it's worth considering how the tax cuts would affect the average family. Take college tuition as an example. If the average family's college tuition costs $30,000 a year, it's entirely possible they'd save $1,200 under the plan. That's not a lot of money, but it would probably help ease the burden of paying for college. With the Bush tax cuts in place, families could save about $600 per year on their tuition
