to know what is the difference between the following two statements? I am trying to know the difference between the following two statements. First one is showing heap space full after running. > java -Xms256m -Xmx512m 2.0.0.0 -Xms256m means assign heap space as 256 megabyte. -Xmx512m means assign heap space as 512 megabyte. But when I tried second one, it is showing execution failed. > java -Xms256m -Xmx512m app.class 2.0.0.0 -Xms256m means assign heap space as 256 megabyte. -Xmx512m means assign heap space as 512 megabyte. Exception in thread "main" java.lang.OutOfMemoryError:

Requested allocation exceeded VM limit; Xmx set to 512MB A: You shouldn't be trying to do this with `Runtime.getRuntime()`.

Instead, use `java.lang.Runtime.getRuntime()`. The `xm` value is a memory size limit. `256m` is the minimum and the maximum is the default maximum you set (at `512m` for instance). Allocations beyond that size will fail. The second example will work because you are increasing the limit. You'll have to set the default by editing the `/etc/system` file. Difficulties linked to menstrual cycle are common and usually not due to hormonal changes. Numerous causes that might result in such problems include viral, bacterial, fungal or other infectious diseases, hormonal treatment, organ and tissue damage, structural defects or disorders, or the presence of serious diseases like cancer, cardiovascular or autoimmune diseases and many more. If you suspect that you have a medical problem linked to your menstrual cycle or to the change of your period, make sure to consult your doctor right away. Possible Symptoms If you have a cyclic pain, make sure to look for its possible causes. You can lower the chance of having such a condition by identifying the 1cdb3666d
