Photoshop CS4 is a complex program that's beyond the scope of this book. The following are a few highlights of the program you should know: Layer styles and layer masks: Anything you see overlaying layers is merely cosmetic. Each layer of an image in Photoshop contains a different setting that influences a visual effect. For example, an image can be created that has layers that are transparent so that you see the image beneath. Or you can create a smooth, rounded shape to embellish the image. In addition, you can hide certain layers, retain shapes, change the color, or change a layer's fill or overlay. To create a new layer, just press the Ctrl (+Option+N) key combination. In Photoshop, you can use the Shadows, Blur, and other visibility tools to enhance the appearance of a layer. In addition, you can create graduated or silhouette effects to emphasize a section of an image. Brushes: Brushes are paint objects that you use to create or alter an image. In addition to regular brushes, Photoshop can create transparent brushes that allow you to create effects that are not limited to the canvas. Adjustment layers: These are layers that contain adjustment tools, such as color, saturation, and contrast. An adjustment tool allows you to make a change to an image. It does not create new pixels, only makes a change to the pixels of the image. Eyedropper: If you're a pro, you may use the eyedropper tool to get the color of a line, a text box, or any other visible object. Filters: Filters are one of the most sophisticated tools in Photoshop. Hundreds of filters are available from which to choose, allowing you to use filters to create wonderful effect of the subject. Layers: Layers are graphic elements that you can add to an image. Layer styles and masks are what you normally associate with layers. Masking: With a mask, you can apply different selections to different areas of the image. If you select any area of the image, it appears to be replaced. A mask is used to make an image as a solid area or as a selection. Paths: You create a path by using the Line, Rectangle, Polygon, and Ellipse tools. Paths consist of points you can connect or segments that you can merge. Selection tools: The selection tools enable you to select different areas of an image. You can

1. Field of the Invention The invention is directed to a process for producing a paper pulp having a cellulose percentage of more than 40%. In particular, this paper pulp is used to produce a high quality plywood. 2. Description of the Related Art A continuous process for producing an alkaline paper pulp from cellulosic fibers is well known in the art. The fibers are dispersed in an aqueous medium, usually water. An important step in this process is the separation of liquid and air in the pulp. The aqueous mixture may be drawn out of a pulp liquor or a sludge liquor, which are the waste water from the process. Many different separation means are known for separating air from pulp. These include, but are not limited to, air deflection devices, gravity drainage, screen/wire belts, rotating disks, and centrifugal devices. Examples of equipment using the rotating disk concept are disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,417,971; U.S. Pat. No. 4,490,256; U.S. Pat. No. 4,621,876; U.S. Pat. No. 4,692,310; U.S. Pat. No. 4,767,527; and U.S. Pat. No. 5,128,126. An example of equipment utilizing the screen and wire belt concept are disclosed in U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,421,540; 4,427,572; 4,632,811; 4,765,842; 4,772,321; 4,779,714; 4,817,976; 4,892,719; and 4,936,167. An example of equipment utilizing the gravity drainage concept is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,241,201. Typically, paper pulp is manufactured as a low-grade pulp. The quality of the pulp is decided by its air contents. The higher the contents of air, the lower the quality of the pulp. To maximize the amount of pulp in a given amount of water, it is common practice to use air deflection devices, such as vibrating screens and rotating disk spin boxes. The reason for this is simple: If paper pulp was not deflected by these devices, the pulp liquor would be drawn through the screen or spin box very quickly. The pulp would then be diluted by the pulp liquor or become
