Rugby Union: The Welsh make statement 28th February, 2012 The Wales women’s side claimed a convincing 28-14 victory against Ireland to leave them on the cusp of a World Cup semi-final. The teams had met three times previously in the Six Nations but Wales were aiming for the first win in the series after their one previous triumph in 2011. Ireland team manager Mick McKee had been keen to try and find a response after the 38-10 victory against Scotland four days before. In the end, it was not going to be as straightforward as that and Wales did not take their opponents lightly. The hosts started well and their tactic of playing on the counter-attack proved effective. It took the visitors until the 20th minute to register their first points and when the Wales defence cracked, they allowed some quick ball into midfield to secure the opening score. Wales continued to operate at pace and a good drive through the gap gave Carlee Cummins the chance to work her way over the gain line and cross for Danne Murphy to score. Ireland attempted to respond when another chance came their way and they were rewarded with the first try of the match from a try by sister Kathleen Kingston. Wales led 6-4 at the interval but they were struggling to put pressure on the visitors with their passing. The two starting centres Sam Warburton and Toni Duggan started together for the first time in the match and had it not been for some defensive errors from Ireland, the visitors could have looked on track for a bonus point. Wales did however go close when Ospreys wing Eleri Jones, on her debut for the national side, kept her side in the game with a well-taken try following a smart break from Russia’s Ane Gittins. Wales had their best chance of the half as a driving run from hooker Ffrancys Peters was halted and Cummins went over for Wales’ second try after some good work from the centre, despite another opposition try. Ireland failed to play in the wet conditions as their discipline slipped, and Ireland’s lack of ball was

The therapeutic potential of low-frequency (LF) electromagnetic field (EMF) exposure has been disputed since the early twentieth century. Apparent animal research has suggested beneficial effects on cancer, cardiovascular, and musculoskeletal systems, as well as in Alzheimer's disease. Population studies have been elusive, but since 2002, epidemiologic studies of human subjects have been increasing in size and quality. Many of these studies have reported associations between cell phone use and health endpoints. If the association is found, the data should then be extrapolated to human risks. This review includes reports of widespread concerns about human health effects from cell phone use, including at least 26 case reports or epidemiologic studies. The medical community's lack of clarity regarding the epidemiologic studies is understandable, given that many of the early investigations are either statistically flawed or lack
