metroid and metroid prime are both side-scrolling platform/roguelike action games. in brawl and ultimate , samus represents the former and link represents the latter. the ending of brawl also ended with samus removing her helmet in true metroid fashion if kirby had defeated all of the metroids. samus appears during the credits of ultimate as well, but this time giving kirby a heart star, instead of removing her helmet. the "alarm ring" in this stage's name is a reference to the "alarm clock" in "a" "red alarm" without "yellow alarm" from "green alarm" (two of the original nes-era kirby titles). the alarm cue would be a frequent pop-in in those games. although this alarm ring is different from all previous alarm rings in the same game. taking place on the milky way, both players start near the bottom-left corner of the screen, and the starting positions are not fixed; kirby can be anywhere on the scene, as usual. both players start with one copy of kirby super star ultra, which is the only way to play this stage. once the match starts, both players start shooting each other with their fire balloons. after every two rounds of shots, a sort of trash can drop below the level, leaving a lot of garbage for the taking. every round of balloon shooting during the match includes fireballs of various colors, and at the end of the match, the color of the most recently taken balloon will turn black, so that it can easily be confused for a balloon. at the end of the match, if either player has 2 or 3 hearts, they will get a "final smash", which follows the rules of the name of the character (except for the flaming star in kirby super star), and is also decided at the end of each round of balloon shots. a stage is named at the end of the match: super smash bros.. while the numbers of hearts given to players for the final smash is fixed, the number of fire balloons shot per round is variable.

a large pink octopus with fireballs and a small bush monster. kirby is vulnerable to these enemies' attacks. kirby can inhale enemies with the ability to turn them into stars if they are not already stars, then drop them out of his mouth. if kirby uses this, the enemies will be transformed into stars, and cannot be inhaled again.
