A HIGHLY-decorated dual-incident officer who courageously confronted the London Bridge terrorists has revealed the moments he and another officer were sent to the couple's flat with a "direct threat to kill". Scotland Yard's Assistant Commissioner Mark Rowley confirmed that the man killed during Wednesday's attacks was the officer in a white shirt who, while protecting the two women who died in the atrocity, was stabbed in the neck. The officer, who was out celebrating the wedding of a fellow police officer, was stabbed at the foyer of the Bethnal Green Road apartment block while on the phone to his wife on Thursday night. Mr Rowley, who was on the scene for the operation to recover the knife from the building's lift, spoke of the harrowing scene: "The man who was wounded was at the top of the stairs. He was wounded in the neck by a single stab wound. The other male officer was at the bottom of the stairs. He was stabbed on the knee." (Image: Reuters) The officer, who has not been named, was taken to the John Radcliffe Hospital in Oxford Circus, where he underwent surgery before being transferred to another hospital. The man, in his mid-30s, was in hospital on Friday night, and a Metropolitan Police statement said: "He is in a stable condition and conscious. "He will remain in hospital overnight for further assessment and will then be transferred to a specialist unit." The officer was initially treated for his injuries at the scene, but the statement continued: "His life was saved by his quick thinking and selfless actions. "He immediately saw what was happening and ran towards the terrorists, he bravely tried to hold
