I have a category object that looks like this class Category The present invention relates generally to electrical equipment and, more particularly, to a method and system for passively cooling a power converter. Rectifier circuits for receiving AC voltage pulses and developing DC voltage pulses are well known. The rectifier circuits may be used in power supplies, power converters, power supplies and power converters, e.g., for aircraft applications, and may have other applications as well. Many commonly used rectifier circuits use components that are heat sensitive and therefore require active cooling systems that dissipate heat to the ambient environment. FIG. 1 illustrates a rectifier circuit 100 that provides a series of pulses of voltage output VO. As shown, circuit 100 includes a number of diodes connected in series to produce the VO pulses. In particular, diodes 102 and 104 produce a positive half-cycle voltage of VO, while diodes 106, 108, and 110 produce a negative half-cycle of the voltage. Depending on application, circuit 100 may require a large DC current. Many active cooling systems cannot dissipate the heat developed by circuit 100 and therefore cause it to fail. For example, active cooling systems are not well suited for use with high frequency circuits such as circuit 100. As shown, circuits including active cooling systems are large and consume a significant amount of power. Accordingly, an advanced cooling system for a power converter is needed. In particular, an advanced cooling system for circuit 100
